1-3. Explanation of abbreviations and terms

Abbreviations and special terms used in this pamphlet are explained in the glossary.

1-4. Objective

a. The objective of the AAP is to identify and establish goals, responsibilities, and policies that support the Army EO Program. The thrust of the Army EO Program continues to be, "to firmly embed the equal opportunity function within the Army's leadership framework." Fairness, justice, and equity for all soldiers, regardless of race, color, ethnicity, gender, or religion are obligations of leadership and functions of command.

b. To accomplish any mission, leaders must ensure that their units are properly trained and that their soldiers, their equipment, and they, themselves, are in the proper state of readiness at all times. Soldiers must be committed to accomplishing the mission through unit cohesion developed as a result of a healthy leadership climate. Leaders at all levels promote individual readiness by developing competence and confidence in their subordinates. A leadership climate in which all soldiers perceive they are treated with fairness, justice, and equity is crucial to the development of this confidence.

c. The AAP must direct affirmative actions in support of Army policy that will provide equal opportunity and treatment for all soldiers regardless of race, color, gender, religion, or national origin. It must reflect the high priority afforded these important tasks and the commitment of the Army to achieve its objective.

1-5. Scope

a. The Army AAP is a personnel management document; it fulfills a specific DOD requirement that military departments develop and publish comprehensive EO AAPs. It aligns requirements outlined in DODD 1350.2, DODI 1350.3, and AR 600-20.

b. Actions directed in this document are designed to-

- (1) Prevent personal discrimination and assure opportunities for upward mobility for all qualified soldiers.
- (2) Provide informational sources concerning the demographics of the Army.
- (3) Infuse AAPs into military organizations by placing affirmative action responsibility into the hands of commanders.

1-6. Racial and ethnic designation categories (REDCAT)

a. The race or population group and ethnic group designations in tables 1-1 and 1-2 are the standard DOD categories and reporting codes.

b. To avoid double-counting of racial and ethnic group statistics, the guide in table 1-3 is provided. REDCAT will be used to display data on race and ethnicity within the U.S. Army.

Chapter 3 Goal Development, Review and Analysis, and Measurement

3-1. Goal Development

a. Criteria. The basis for goal development is the identification of an affirmative action requirement. The requirement arises from a need to manage, assess, and report on the status of minority and female soldiers. In each case, however, affirmative action proponents should ensure that goals are developed from the best available data and in a logical and consistent manner.

b. Goal development process. The success of this effort will depend on the extent to which proponents for specific affirmative actions actually develop (not merely review) the affirmative actions for which they are responsible. Each level in the chain of command must participate in goal development. Heads of major Staff agencies and commanders must interact on a face-to-face basis with their subordinates to ensure that all participants have an understanding of the goal. Accountability or ownership of affirmative action goals must rest with the commander or Staff agency head with the resources and authority to influence goal outcome.

3-2. Goal revision

Goal design should be based on sound reasoning, consideration of pertinent variables, realistic constraints, and prospects for achievement. Goal revision will occur routinely following the annual assessment. Proponents may forward any recommendations for goal revision to HQDA (DAPE-MPH-E) WASH DC 20310-0300 at any time.

3-3. Review and analysis

a. Just as in goal development, successful review, analysis, and reporting of affirmative action progress must involve commanders, heads of staff agencies and their subordinates. Periodic reviews presented to MACOM commanders are particularly effective and set the stage for information exchange, guidance, and follow-up action.

b. EOAs should also plan for, and commanders should expect, at least two in-depth internal assessments of their command and subordinate units each year. These semiannual reviews should, at a minimum, cover the following:

(1) Training. Training is a cornerstone of all Army activities. An assessment of training would include a review of EO unit training, equal opportunity representative (EOR) training and leader training.

(2) Complaints. The outcome, course of action taken on each, and answering as to "Why?" of all complaints must be done periodically in a structured manner.

(3) Key positions. All organizations have commonly recognized positions that are critical to their effectiveness, and thus a key to individual growth and career development. A regular review of these positions and a comparison with the population available to fill them (by REDCAT and gender) is a valid component of any EO assessment.

(4) Personnel actions. These actions, both positive (such as local promotions, awards, and schooling) and adverse (such as judicial, nonjudicial and separations) should be reviewed periodically, by REDCAT and gender. Analysis of aggregate figures in large units (brigade and above) can hide areas of interest. On the other hand, when reviewing data of small units or detachments, use of percentage figures is cautioned.

(5) Ethnic observances. Observances are considered an important aspect of the overall program. Therefore, the status of this portion of the program should be formally reviewed to ensure that all ethnic observances are professionally planned and executed. Note: These semiannual reviews are intended for in-house use only and will not be required to be reported to higher headquarters.

3-4. Measurement

a. General. Measurement is an essential element of affirmative action management and will be used for all areas that have quantifiable goals.

(1) Actual results achieved will be compared with affirmative action goals. Measurement also provides a basis to—

- (a) Identify trends
- (b) Highlight differences

(2) Data collection provides decision makers with a management tool necessary for assessment of their affirmative action management efforts. It can also highlight progress and identify problem areas. This information must not be viewed in a vacuum. Attitude, perception, experience, and management judgement are also important and must be considered by commanders and managers in assessing EO progress and identifying problem areas.

b. Measurement technique.

(1) Representation index (RI). RIs can be used to measure change. The RI does not determine causes; rather, the RI measures the effects of what has occurred. Its value lies in that it may be used to isolate particular areas that require closer examination.

(2) Calculation.

(a) RIs are derived from a comparison of the actual number and the expected number of a category in a particular situation; that is, those being selected, promoted, assigned, and so forth. The formula used to develop the RI is as follows: Actual number divided by expected number, times 100, minus 100, equals the percentage of over or under-representation.

(b) By this formula, a zero results when the actual number and the expected number are the same. The expected number is that number of people who would occur in a particular situation if the people in that situation were selected randomly from the eligible population. A zero means that there is no difference between comparison groups in the dimension being considered. If the actual number of a group is greater than the expected number, the result is a positive percentage, which means that group is over-represented in that dimension by the percentage indicated. If the actual number is less than the expected number, the result is a negative percentage, which means that the group is under-represented by the percentage indicated. Over-representation and under-representation are both only indicators that people are treated differently. THE RI WILL NOT BE USED AS A MEANS TO PROJECT GOALS.

(3) Example of an RI. The result of a hypothetical selection board illustrates how the RI is used. The RI can be computed by following the procedural outlines below:

- (a) Total number eligible (considered) equal 1000
- (b) Number of "group 1" who are eligible (considered) equal 160
- (c) Expected percentage equals 10 divided by 1000 equals 16 percent
- (d) Total number selected equal 500
- (e) Expected number equals .16 times 500 equals 80
- (f) Actual number of "group 1" selected equal 60
- (g) RI equals (60 divided by 80 times 100) minus 100 equals negative 25 percent
- (h) The resultant percentage means that "group 1's" are under-represented in this selection board by 25 percent. The percentage does not say anything about what caused the difference. The long-term goals are to arrive at the point where the RIs approach zero. But, through chance alone, the RI will usually fall on either side of the baseline.
